Commentaire : First edition. This print is considered an Elzevier-print. On front free endpaper a printed label from the library of Meron=Allen gives references to Willems, 1353, Suppl., 358, Berghman, 319 and Rahir, 1404. ""The abbey (Cistercian nuns) was established in 1204, but became famous when its discipline was reformed in 1609 by its abbess, Mother Marie Angelique Arnauld (1591-1661). The Arnauld family became its patrons and the abbey's subsequent history was directed by a number of the members of that family. In 1625 most of the nuns moved to a new Port-Royal in Paris, which subsequently became Port-Royal de Paris (or, more commonly, Port-Royal) while the older one was known as Port-Royal des Champs (""Port-Royal of the fields"").
