

BERNARD (C.)

Leçons de physiologie expérimentale appliquée à la médecine faites au Collège de France -- EDITION ORIGINALE -- BEL EXEMPLAIRE -- 2 VOLUMES (complete set)

Référence : 422

P., Baillière, 1855/1856; 2 volumes in 8 reliés en demi-chagrin marron, dos ornés de fers et filets dorés (reliure de l'époque), (quelques rousseurs), T.1 : 8pp., 520pp., 22 figures, T.2 : 8pp., 510pp., 1ff (catalogue de l'édit.), 78 figures.

Commentaire : ---- EDITION ORIGINALE ----- BEL EXEMPLAIRE ---- Heirs of Hippocrates N° 1792 : "Bernard, the renowned French physiologist, is regarded as the founder of experimental medicine. He had unusual literary talent but decided to devote himself to the study of medicine. Bernard became an intern under François Magendie at the Hôtel-Dieu in Paris in 1839 and began a fruitful association with him. Bernard assisted Magendie in his experiments, collaborated with him in his scientific papers and later worked on his own problems and wrote his own papers. Magendie, while making great discoveries, usually went about his work in a haphazard fashion, Bernard, on the other hand, was a careful worker and observer. All of his great discoveries were based on isolated facts which he had the ability to correlate and build into larger physiological generalizations which he later verified by experiments. The Academie des Sciences awarded Bernard the grand prix in physiology in 1849, 1851 and 1853, for his discoveries concerning the pancreas, the liver, and the vasomotor function and other activities of the sympathetic nervous system. This basic work on the application of experimental physiology to medicine contains, among others, his memorable work on glycogenesis and experimental diabetes" ---- GARRISON N° 615 : "C. Bernard made strenuous efforts to introduce experimental methodes into physiology. The above includes his classical work on the function of the liver, pancreas and gastric glands" ---- DSB II pp. 24/34 - Norman N° 201422/D2+CART4(7561-7578-437-418)

Prix : 290,00 €

Cet article vous est proposé par :

Librairie Bernard Maille

maille5@wanadoo.fr

Tél. 01 43 25 51 73

3, rue Dante

75005 Paris

France

<https://v5.livre-rare-book.net/livres/5473004-422>